However, if you brave the cold waters of the bay for a dive, you'll probably see strawberry fields covering areas of the ocean floor.. The luminous pink-orange glow is a result of biofluorescence—proteins in its cells absorb energy from ultraviolet light and reemit it as a different color.. In recent years the strawberry anemone's historical range has expanded to areas of the Monterey Bay as a result of warmer waters due to climate change.. Best 1920x1080 fish wallpaper, full hd, hdtv, fhd, 1080p desktop background for any computer, laptop, tablet and phone.. Strawberry Anemones Forever Corynactis californica, often called the strawberry anemone or club-tipped anemone, isn't an anemone at all! It's actually more closely related to stony corals.. You're unlikely to come across these anemones while you're out tide-pooling since they're typically found in water deeper than 11 feet.
